

Non-members Code of Conduct

NASED meetings are generally open to non-members. In order to ensure that our meetings remain open and that our relationship with those outside the organization remain positive and productive, NASED adopted a Code of Conduct. The Code is as follows:

There is no display area for vendors for the NASED meeting. Vendors who wish to advertise may do so by submitting a one-page advertisement for the registration packet. A fee will be charged of $300 for this advertisement. (See the “advertisement” section for more information.)

Vendors in attendance on the first day will be recognized by the President.

There will be no discussions permitted inside the meeting room, except during breaks. Non-members and vendors will be expected not to have discussions while presenters are speaking. There will be zero-tolerance for interrupting speakers.

All vendors and non-members will be expected to act professionally at all times. Any unprofessional activity will result in a request that the individual leaves the conference.

As a matter of professional courtesy, those in the meeting room who receive calls on their cell phones will be asked to step out into the hall so as not to disturb the meeting.
